ANDHRA PRADESH FARMERS MANAGEMENT OF IRRIGATION SYSTEMS ACT, 1997

11 of 1997

[9th APRIL, 1997]

Statement of Objects and Reasons Water is a scarce source which requires to be harnessed and utilised in the most efficient manner. The widespread deterioration of Irrigation Infrastructure with little or no participation from farmers has aggravated the low utilisation of Irrigation commands. Area in Irrigation is shrinking in most of the major and medium command which has to be arrested by improving the conductor system and the drainage net work through Farmers' Organisations. It is therefore desirable and essential that management of Irrigation system is restructured to make water management more efficient with farmers' participation. Irrigation management is a social activity and has to be looked in the context of social inequality, conflicts, hierarchy, cultural and social influence, local leadership, pattern of participation of local agencies and group dynamics in the rural areas. They have their own role to play and many a time they work at cross purposes. It is necessary to integrate the various forces working in rural areas and harness them for optimum utilization of water which is a vital National resource. Experience in India and elsewhere has shown that involving the users in the whole process of management and operation results in optimum utilisation of any resource. Farmers' Organisations would usher in improved water use efficiency and reduction. If not elimination, of wastage of this precious resource, greater crop-discipline, increased area brought legitimately under irrigation by the savings so generated, elimination of concealment of unauthorised irrigation, equitable distribution of water, better collection of water rates, superior maintenance and operation of the irrigation system and higher accountability of the Government Departments to the needs and aspirations of the farmers. Government proposes to take the initiative by this legislation to promote farmers' participation in the management of irrigation systems. Hence the bill seeks to give effect to the above decisions.
