The recovery memo of plain and blood stained earth was prepared and the recovery memo was in his writing which is Ext. Ka-6. He has also prepared the inquest report on the direction of Station House Officer which is in his writing.

11. On examination of evidence on record the learned Sessions Judge has found that the prosecution case against the appellant Bijendra Singh has been proved beyond reasonable doubt and treating the case to be rarest of rare case the trial Court has awarded on the appellant extreme penalty of death but co-accused Subhash Yadav has been acquitted as the case against him has been found to be not free from doubt.

12. We have heard learned counsel for the appellant and learned A.G.A. for the State.

13. Learned counsel for the appellant submitted before us that the circumstances from which conclusion of guilt of accused-appellant was sought to be drawn by prosecution have not been established beyond reasonable doubt and further that the circumstances on which reliance has been placed or not conclusive in nature and the chain of evidence has remain incomplete inasmuch as every hypothesis consistent of innocence of the appellant has not been excluded. It was further argued that the trial Court had relied upon in (sic) admissible evidence. On the contrary the learned A.G.A. supported the judgment of the trial Court and argued that the proved circumstances which have emerged out in this case are so clinching that no other reasonable view is possible accepting to hold the appellant guilty. Undisputedly there is no direct evidence of the commission of rape and murder of deceased Babli at the hands of appellant and the prosecution case entirely rests upon circumstantial evidence. It will be appropriate to summarise the circumstances relied upon by the prosecution. The circumstances are as follows :-

(1) On 29-1-98 the appellant along with Subhash Yadav came at the house of complainant Brijendra Singh and talked about the marriage of his daughters and on his refusal the appellant had threatened him.

(2) Complainant had sent some people for searching his daughter to the house of appellant in P.A.C. Colony and appellant was not there and Subhash Yadav was in perturbed condition,

(3) The dead body of Babli was recovered on the pointing out of appellant in a field in Quarsi on Aligarh Ramgarh road.

(4) On 31-1-98 police had recovered washed cloth and shoes of the appellant; and

(5) On 1-2-98 Frock of Babli, which she was wearing at the time of occurrence was recovered on the pointing out of appellant.

14. Finding the above circumstances established, the learned Sessions Judge was of the opinion that no other view was possible except that the appellant was guilty of committing rape and murder of deceased Babli. As the prosecution case entirely rests upon circumstantial evidence the principles governing appreciation of evidence in such cases have to be kept in mind :-

15. The Apex Court in the case of Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit Vs. State of Maharashtra, held that first of all it is necessary to find out whether the circumstances on which the prosecution relies are established by satisfactory evidence, often described as "clear and cogent" and secondly, whether the circumstances are of such a nature as to exclude every other hypothesis save the one that the accused is guilty of the offence of which he is charged. In other words, the circumstances have to be of such a nature as to be consistent with the sole hypothesis that the accused is guilty of the crime imputed to him.

16. In the celebrated cases of Sharad Birdhichand Sarda Vs. State of Maharashtra, , the Hon"ble Supreme Court has pointed out five golden principles constituting of the proof of a case based on circumstances. They are :

(1) the circumstances from which conclusion of guilt is to be drawn should be fully established; i.e. the circumstances concerned "must" or "should" and not "may be" established. There is not only a grammatical but a legal distinction between "may be proved" and "must be or should be proved" as was held in Shivaji Sahabrao Bobade and Another Vs. State of Maharashtra, .

(2) the facts so established should be consistent only with the hypothesis of the guilt of the accused that is to say, they should not be explainable on any other hypothesis except that the accused is guilty.

- (3) The circumstances should be of a conclusive nature and tendency,
- (4) They should exclude every possible hypothesis except the one to be proved; and
- (5) There must be a chain of evidence so complete as not to leave any reasonable ground for the conclusion consistent with the innocence of the accused and must show that in all human probability the act must have been done by the accused;

17. In G.V. Raju v. State of Andhra Pradesh 1994 JIC 16 (21), a note of caution was given by the Apex Court that while dealing with the cases resting upon circumstantial evidence alone, there is always a danger that conjecture or suspicion may take the place of proof. Gravity of offence cannot by itself overweigh so far as legal proof is concerned. When the main link goes, the chain of circumstances gets snapped and the other circumstances cannot in any manner establish the guilt of the accused beyond all reasonable doubts. It is at this juncture, the Court has to be watchful and avoid the danger of allowing the suspicion to take the place of legal proof for sometimes unconsciously it may happen to be a short step between moral certainty and legal proof.

18. In a recent decision in V.C. Rao v. Ponna Satyanarayana (2000) 41 All Cri C 210 : AIR 2000 SC 2138, it was held that the cumulative effect of the proved circumstances must be such as to negate the innocence of the accused and to bring home the offender beyond any reasonable doubt.

19. In another decision in Gade Lakshmi Mangraju @ Ramesh Vs. State of Andhra Pradesh, the Apex Court has laid down that one circumstance by itself may not unerringly point to the guilt of the accused. To acquit the accused on that basis is not a safe method for appreciating a case based on circumstantial evidence. It is the cumulative result of all the circumstances alleged and proved, which matters. It is not open to call out one circumstance from the rest for the purpose of giving a different meaning to it.

20. Bearing all these principles in mind, we now proceed to examine the evidence on record to find out whether the circumstances relied upon by the prosecution have been established by cogent, succinct and reliable evidence and secondly whether the circumstances so established are such as cannot be explained on any hypothesis except the guilt of the accused and whether the proved circumstances provide a complete chain and unequivocally point to the guilt of the accused and exclude any hypothesis consistent with his innocence.

21. As regards the first circumstance that on 29-1-98 the appellant along with Subhash Yadav came at the house of complainant Brijendra Singh and talked about the marriage of his daughters and on his refusal the appellant had threatened him, it is submitted that appellant along with Subhash Yadav had threatened the complainant in case he does not agree to marry his daughter towards the side of Bihar. This circumstance is not only against the appellant but also against Subhash

Yadav, who has been acquitted by the trial Court. This circumstance can only provide a motive for the appellant but at the same time it can hardly be sufficient motive for the crime like commission of the present one and at the same time this was the motive for acquitted Subhash Yadav also.

22. As regards the second circumstance that complainant had sent some people for searching his daughter to the house of appellant in P.A.C. Colony and appellant was not there and Subhash Yadav was in perturbed condition, there is nothing abnormal in the absence of appellant from his house at a particular point of time. On the other hand the circumstance is wholly against Subhash Yadav who was said to be in a perturbed condition and he has already been acquitted by the Sessions Judge.

23. The third circumstance relied upon by the Sessions Judge is the recovery of the dead body on the pointing out of the appellant in a field in Quarsi on Aligarh Ramgarh road, the recovery of the dead body of deceased Babli is on the joint pointing out of the appellant and acquitted accused Subhash Yadav. Recovery being on the joint pointing out and it has hardly any evidentiary value u/s 27 of the Evidence Act. Section 27 of the Evidence Act reads as under :

How much information received from accused may be proved-provided that, when any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence, in the custody of a police officer, so much of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, may be proved.

24. Section 27 of the Evidence Act is in the nature of proviso to Sections 25 and 26. Such statements which have been made admissible u/s 27 are generally termed as disclosure statements leading to the recovery of facts which are presumably in the exclusive knowledge of the maker. This provision appears to be based on the view that if a fact is actually discovered in consequence of information given some guarantee is afforded thereby that the information was true and therefore, it can be safely allowed to be given in evidence.

25. The position of law in relation to Section 27 of the Act was elaborately made clear by the Privy Council in the famous case of Pulukuri Kottaya v. Emperor AIR 1947 PC 67, wherein it was held :

Section 27, which is not artistically recorded, provides an exception to the prohibition imposed by the preceding Section, and enables certain statements made by a person in police custody to be proved. The condition necessary to bring the Section into operation is that discovery of a fact in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence in the custody of a police officer must be deposed to, and thereupon so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved. The Section seems to be based on the view that if a fact is actually discovered in consequence .of Information given, some guarantee is afforded thereby that the information was true, and accordingly can be safely allowed to be given in evidence; but clearly the extent of the information admissible must depend on the exact nature of the fact discovered to which such information is required to relate. Normally the Section is brought into operation when a person in police custody produces from some place of concealment some object, such a dead-body, a weapon or ornaments, said to be connected with the crime of which the informant is accused. Mr. Megaw, for the Crown has argued that in such case the "fact discovered" is the physical object produced, and that any information which relates distinctly to that object can be proved. Upon this view information given by a person that the body produced is that of a person murdered by him, that the weapon produced is the one used by him in the commission of a murder, or that the ornaments produced were stolen in a dacoity would all be admissible. If this be the effect of Section 27, little substance would remain in the ban imposed by the two preceding Sections on confessions made to the police, or by persons in police custody. That ban was presumably inspired by the fear of the Legislature that a person under police influence might be induced to confess by the exercise of undue pressure. But if all that is required to lift the ban be the inclusion in the confession of information relating to an object subsequently produced, it seems reasonable to suppose that the persuasive powers of the police will prove equal to the occasion, and that in practice the ban will lose its effect. On normal principles of construction their Lordships think that the proviso to Section 26, added by Section 27, should not be held to nullify the substance of the Section. In their Lordships' view it is fallacious to treat the fact discovered within the Section as equivalent to the object produced; the fact discovered embraces the place from which the object is produced and the knowledge of the accused as to this and the information given must relate distinctly to this fact. Information as to past user, or the past history, of the object produced is not related to its discovery in the setting in which it is discovered. Information supplied by a person in custody that "I will produce a knife concealed in the roof of my house" does not lead to the discovery of a knife, knives were discovered many years ago. It leads to the discovery of the fact that a knife is concealed in the house of the informant to his knowledge, and if the knife is proved to have been used in the commission of the offence, the fact discovered is very relevant. But if to the statement the words be added "with which I stabbed A these words are admissible since they do not relate to the discovery of the knife in the house of the informant.

26. In Mohmed Inayatullah Vs. The State of Maharashtra, the Apex Court held that the expression "fact discovered" includes not only the physical object produced but also place from which it is produced and the knowledge of the accused as to that. Interpreting the words of Section "so much of the information" as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, the Court held that the words "distinctly", "indubitably", "strictly", "unmistakably". The words has been advisedly used to limit and define the scope of provable information. The phrase "distinctly" relates "to the fact thereby discovered". The phrase refers to that part of information supplied by the accused which is the direct cause of discovery of a fact. The rest of the information has to be excluded.

27. The Apex Court in Earabhadrappa, alias Krishnappa v. State of Karnataka held that for the applicability of Section 27 of the Evidence Act two conditions are prerequisite, viz. (i) information must be such as has caused discovery of the fact, and (ii) the information must "relate distinctly" to the fact discovered. u/s 27 only so much of the information as distinctly relates to the fact really thereby discovered, is admissible. While deciding the applicability of Section 27 of the Evidence Act, the Court has also to keep in mind that nature of presumption under Illustrations (a) to (s) of Section 114 of the Evidence Act. The Court can, therefore, presume the existence of a fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events human conduct and public and private business, in their relations to the facts of the particular case. In that case one of the circumstances relied upon by the prosecution against the accused was that on being arrested after a year of the incident, the accused made a statement before the police leading to the recovery of some of the gold ornaments of the deceased and her six silk sarees, from different places which were identified by the witness as belonging to the deceased. In that context the Court observed :

There is no controversy that the statement made by the appellant Ext. P-35 is admissible u/s 27 of the Evidence Act. u/s 27 only so much of the information as distinctly relates to the facts really thereby discovered is admissible. The word "fact" means some concrete or material fact to which the information directly relates.

28. The Apex Court in a recent decision in State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde JT (2000) 5 375 : AIR 2000 SC 1691 has held that the basic idea embedded in Section 27 of the Evidence Act is the doctrine of confirmation by subsequent events. The doctrine is founded on the principle that if any fact is discovered in a search made on the strength of any information obtained from a prisoner, such a discovery is a guarantee that the information supplied by the prisoner is true. The information might be confessional or non-inculpatory in nature, but if it results in discovery of a fact it becomes a reliable information. Hence the Legislature permitted such information to be used as evidence by restricting the admissible portion to the minimum. It is now well settled that recovery of an object is not discovery of a fact as envisaged in the section. The decision of the Privy Council in Pulukuri Kottaya v. Emperor AIR 1947 PC 67, is the most quoted authority for supporting the interpretation that the fact discovered envisaged in the section embraces the place from which the object was produced, the knowledge of the accused as to it, but the information given must relate distinctly to that effect."

29. In the latest decision in Pandurang Kalu Patil and Another Vs. State of Maharashtra, it was held that the object of making a provision in Section 27 was to permit a certain portion of the statement made by an accused to a police officer admissible in evidence whether or not such statement is confessional or non-confessional. Nonetheless, the ban against admissibility would stand lifted if the statement distinctly related to a discovery of fact. The fact can be discovered by the Investigating Officer pursuant to an information elicited from the accused if such disclosure was followed by one or more of a variety of causes. Recovery of an object is only one such cause. Recovery or even production of object by itself need not necessarily result in discovery of fact. Discovery of a fact cannot be equated with recovery of the object though the latter may help in the final shape of what exactly was the fact discovered pursuant to the information elicited from the accused.

30. Keeping all these principles in this view we have examined the evidence relating to the recovery of the dead body and Frock of the deceased pursuant to the disclosure statement made by the appellant. A perusal of the recovery memos indicates that at the time of recoveries the appellant was not in custody. On the other hand it is the own case of the prosecution that after the confession and the recovery of the dead body both the constables were arrested. As regard the recovery of the Frock a perusal of the memo of recovery does not indicate that appellant was the author of concealment of frock. In the recovery memo there is no such confessional statement. On the other hand it was found in an open place which was accessible to all and sundry. Apart from this P.W. 5 Bachchan Singh has stated in court that "Phir lash baramad honey key stan sey 150 gaj aagey tube well ki naali sey in dono muljimanon ney mrataka ki frock ke baramad karaya tha." He has further stated that "Virendra ki Larki Babli Gayab ho gai thi Uski lash Vijendra Singh Solanki wa "Subhash Yadav hazir adalat muljiman ki nishan dehi par baramad hui thi tatha inhi abhiyukton dwara mrataka dwara pahni hui frock ko baramad karaya tha tatha daroghaji ney likha parhi ki thi." Thus as per the statement of this witness recoveries of dead body and frock of the deceased were also made on the joint pointing out of the appellant and acquitted accused Subhash Yadav. Once Subhash Yadav has been acquitted, the evidence of recovery of the aforesaid objects cannot be used safely for holding the appellant guilty. The Sessions Judge has also relied upon the circumstance that on 31-1-1998 the police had recovered washed clothes and shoes of the appellant and it is stated that blood stains were washed. This circumstance itself has no legal value unless it was sent for serological examination. The police had not sent the recovered clothes and shoes for the serological test to indicate that the blood stained were washed by the appellant.

31. The co-accused Subhash Yadav is already acquitted by the Sessions Judge and there being no other evidence against the appellant his conviction cannot be sustained. We therefore hold that against the appellant also the prosecution has failed to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt.

32. In the result the appeal is allowed. The judgment and order dated 30-7-2001 passed by Addl. Sessions Judge, Aligarh are set aside. The appellant is acquitted. He is in jail. He shall be set at liberty forthwith unless he is wanted in some other case.
